community an influence for good, based on Christianity. If this be true, then I think it will be generally conceded that the primary object of the church here has been attained only of a very limited extent.

As a practical suggestion to remedy this, I would venture to recommend that the constitution of St. John's Anglican Church should be revised. I am under the impression that some errors have crept into the constitution of that church, considering that with regard to the constitutions simply to administer them as they at present exist, and not to induce the congregation to revise them. If this impression is correct, it is necessary for the congregation to take the initiative, before any revision can be made.

As I believe it is admitted by all that revision is very desirable, I would ask those interested in the matter to give me suggestion their careful consideration.

I remain, dear Sir,
Yours truly
